The QCWA Country Kitchens Program supports Queenslanders to improve their health by adopting healthier lifestyle behaviours, particularly those living in rural, regional and remote locations.

A team of dietitians and nutritionists provide training and support to QCWA members who volunteer to be facilitators of the program.

The QCWA Country Kitchens program is improving food and nutrition literacy, and importantly, influencing behaviour change at a grass roots level. Country Kitchens is funded by the Queensland Government through Health and Wellbeing Queensland. Country Kitchen facilitators run health promotion activities in their local communities and partner with organizations such as schools, local councils and a wide range of community groups.

Each year, the QCWA chooses a primary product to feature and creates an accompanying recipe booklet. The Country Kitchen team also puts together a suite of resources to promote the primary product through a health lens.
